Match No. 13

Date: 11th November 2007.

Venue: River Medway, Watlington, Kent.

Conditions: Initially cold, damp, wet rainy conditions that did improve as the day progressed; there were even a few sunny spells! Windy at times changing direction during the morning
Water level was low with slight flow, very, very clear, this could have accounted for the poor results.

Summary: If you thought the other weeks match on the Beult was slow this one took us to lower depths!
With 6 of us not even getting a bite & the winning weight of just 6½ ozs!
The lack of any serious rain, clear conditions & cold snap had finished it. The river does need rain to colour it up.
Well at least Kevin & Tony amused themselves with the pike, taking dead baits quite readily; maybe there wasn't anything alive in the river to chase?
The consensus of opinion was that they'd all moved downstream to Maidstone, apparently the river had been 'fishing its socks off' down there earlier in the week!
